MISS FREAM NOT A MARTYR.

SHE TRIED TO POSE AS ONE, BUT WAS DISCHARGED. Rest Time She May Not Fare So Well-Career of a Woman Who Has Seen Long a Thorn in the Side of the Police, Rebecca Fream, spinster, the head and body the East Side Law and Order League, who has procured the arrest of a great many people on the cast side and caused many policemen to summoned to Headquarters, spent her first night in a station house after her arrest on evening, not because she had to but because she took it into her head to pose as a martyr. Acting Captain Sheehan, who is in and of the Eldridge street station, did not rest her until he was obliged to, and she made uble enough, at first, but afterward, when was offered for her release, she refused to When she was taken to Essex Market Court yesterday morning and charged by Sergeant Sheehan with disorderly conduct in causing a growd to collect and with interfering with a porades against the corrupt police, and interlarded with assertions that she was a member of the East Side Law and Order League, and that reormers in that territory had not a fair oppor tunity. She apparently did not want to be discharged, but seemed to be glad of the prospec of being made a subject of the cruel and unjust resentment of the corrupt police.

Magistrate Kudlich, although he was not uliar with her career and propensity to cause trouble for the police, detected her seem ing anxiety to be made a sacrifice and resolved

I do not care whether you are Rebecco Fream or somebody else," he said. "I shall not allow you the satisfaction of becoming a martyr this time. You are discharged. But if any person interferes with the police again, that person will be punished.

Miss Fream said she should prefer charges against Sergeant Sheehan and Policeman Schulem, who arrested Jennie Brown, with whose arrest she interfered, her interference drawing a noisy crowd, which attracted the attention of Sergeant Sheehan and resulted in her own a noisy crowd, which attracted the attention of Sergeant Sheehan and resulted in her own arrest.

Miss Fream first came into public notice nearly a decade ago in connection with the murder of Rachel Pitman, who was killed by ber father in anger over her persistent refusal to quit meeting a married man at the house of Miss Fream and to forsake the company of Miss Fream was a witness at the trial. Futman was convicted. He committed spiced in the Tombs, and Miss Fream then acacused his wife of murder, charging that she gave him the means of ending his life.

Neveral years later Miss Fream went to the Fifth street station and asked Sergeant Mc-Kenna if he did not know that a saloon near by was open. He got rid of her in a way she did not like, and she made charges against him. He was tried at Folice Headquarters, and during the trial Mrs. Pitman, who was present, arose, and, pointing at the complainant, exclaimed:

"There is the murderer of my daughter."

Miss Fream was heard of from time to time thereafter, but she became known as a continuous mouser after petty violators of the laws and ordinances at about the time of the resisions of the Letow Committee. She "got the reform tich bad," as one police Sergeant expressed himself, when she saw other people's names in the paper, and she set about getting hers in. She went a she found one she went to a policeman and tried to get him to make an arrest. She also demanded that the police arrest peddlers whom she followed around. Then she began a course against small salesmen. She took a little girl with her, and went on Sundays shrough Avenue D. Hester street, and other east side thoroughfares, and had the child buy a button or a loaf of bread, or some small article. She then called on the police to make an arrest, or on the next morning procured a warrant for the offender.

brought to prevent the sale of the stock in an action brought by La Foliette to set aside the

It was claimed that La Foliette got the option

LANG'S STRANGE DELUSION.

He Instated that He Was Bend and Sent ROCHESTER, July 24. Joseph Lang. a Goodan street saloon keeper, went to the Newport House, on Irondequoit Bay, vesterday, and fell in the water while, it is said, under the influence of liquor. Upon being hauled out Lang insisted that he was dead and that his body was in the hay. He telephoned this fact to Coroner Kleindienst of this city and asked that he come immediately. The Coroner was attending a funeral at the time, and he sent for Coroner Graham, but the latter could not be found, so he left the funeral, and taking dragging irons and two stalwart men drove with them to the bay. When they arrived Lang was sitting on the porch at the hotel. The Coroner insisted that lang shund pay the expenses of the trip, but he refused, and still insisted that he was dead and that his bedy was in the water. The Coroner has brought a civil suit against him in the Municipal Court for $16 damages.

The Burning of the School at Charlotte, ROCHESTER, July 24.-Another step in the ase of the burning of the Catholic school house at Charlotte was the examination to-day of Nora Cronin, the housekeeper of Father Fitzgeraid, the parish priest. She was held to await the action of the Grand Jury on the charge of arson in the first degree. The woman's brother, John Cronin, also an employee of Father Fitz-geraid, is in juil on the same charge, ball having been refused. The case still causes great ex-citement at charjotte, and it is intimated that further arrests will follow.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24. Thirty-seven merchants, nearly all Jows, appeared before Magistrate South to-day in answer to a sum-mous charging them with violating the Sunday law of 15:14. FIGHTING THE ELM BEETLE. Connecticut Cities Overrun with the Pest-Authorities at Work, HARTFORD, July 24.-The authorities of a number of Connecticut cities are now officially on the trail of the rapacious eim beetle. With kerosene emulsion in one hand and a spraying gun in the other hand, a specially appointed band of hunters daily douse the beetle in his of it lifeless. The formula of the emulsion, which was published in THE SUN, was invented by Prof. Jenkins of the Storrs Agricultural effective. It is true that the elm beetle had in Hartford and New Haven before the emulenergetic authorities, there is some satisfaction now in bagging the beetle.

The New Haven beetle hunters have been sloshing" the trees there with the emulsion liberally all the week, and speak with enthusiasm of the good work accomplished. They fairly deluge the trunks of the trees, and in-stantly the insects come forth in swarms and appear to be dizzy headed and sick.

Although the kerosene emulsion is without any doubt the most effective remedy for the pest, at the same time some unofficial beetle fighters use a smudge against them with excel-lent results.

any doubt the most effective remany for the pest, at the same time some unofficial beetle lighters use a smudge against them with excellent results.

Since the authorities actively went to work to exterminate the devouring beetle army, private citizens in all parts of the Elm City have zealously aided the endeavor, carrying on the novel campaign briskly in all quarters. Regularly, bright and early every morning, a long train of people apply at the public emulsion supply house for quart pails of the kerosene mixture. As a rule they apply it only to trees on or about their own premises. A quart of the emulsion diluted with nine quarts of water is a sufficient quantity to treat a single tree. Others make their own emulsion according to Prof. Jenkins's receipt as published in The Sux. Still, the authorities have undertaken to furnish to every applicant all the emulsion he or she may need.

Prof. L. O. Howard, entomologist of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, was in Bridgeport a few days ago. He had been making a professional tour of New England to obtain practical information about the elm bath. He said that he had seen no place in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, or Connecticut that had been so badly ravaxed by the pest as had Bridgeport. In Hartford, however, he added, that "the beelles had made a clearer sweep," [chewing up the follage of both the British and American elms indiscriminately. In some towns residents have successfully used electricity to destroy the insects.

For instance, Superintendent G. W. Beach of the Naugatuck division of the Consolidated Railroad amuses himself with a home-made electric device by means of which he has fatally shocked a host of beetles on a lordly elm at his home in Waterbury. He put a girdle of rubber tape and wires about the base of the trunk, connected the coil with a small battery in his dwelling, and whenever an army of the insects essay to cross the cordon he turns on the lightning. Then for a second and a half there is a small picnic on the surface of the girdle

M'KANE AN EMBEZZLER.

Be in a Decision by Justice Gaynor. Justice Gaynor of the Supreme Court, in Brooklyn, yesterday declared that John Y. Mc-Kane, whose political downfall was accomolished mainly through Justice Gaynor's efforts, embezzled while still the autocrat of Gravesend. The announcement was made in connection with the suit of Joseph J. Kittell to compel the Street Improvement Commissioners of Gravesend to issue and sell bonds to pay him his award of $747, which was granted to him when West Twenty-third street was widened several years

Twenty-third street was widened sets of ago.

The total awards amounted to $5.517, and, in 1800, McKane, who was then the Supervisor of the town, issued bonds and got the money, but, as alleged, made no payments to the claimants. Justice Gaynor has directed that a beremptory mandamus be issued, holding that the act annexing Gravesend to Brooklyn does not in the slightest degree affect the point at issue. He makes this reference to McKane: "The then Supervisor did sell bonds of the town for this and several other improvements, but he embezzled the proceeds."

They said they were a part of the crew of a steamer called the Corinthian, shich blew up on July 15 between the Island of Trinidad and Pernambuco. They were picked Trinidad and Pernambuco. They were picked up the same day by the bark Gertrude, bound to Norfolk and afterward transferred to a fishing smack, which set them ashore yesterday. To-day they reached the Court House in a destitute condition. One took the train for Philadelphia and the other two started to walk to that place. Hughes says his home is in Maine and the other two hall from Philadelphia. The story of the men is stamped as improbable by several circumstances. There is no such steamship as the Corinthian in any marine register, nor is there a bark named Gertrude that was bound for Norfolk at the time they say they were picked up.

Detective Holtic produced in court yesterday morning nine other victims, from each of whom Falmer had been collecting $1 a month. Chief Murphy says that 117 have been found thus far, and the returns are not all in. Falmer put on a bold front. He said that the company is legally incorporated and is doing a legitimate business. legitimate business.
"Who is the President of your company?"
asked Justice Potts.
"We have no President just now," answered the defendant.

"We have no I'resident just now," answered the defendant.
"Who is your Secretary?"
"We haven't any Secretary at present."
"Well, we thought we could get along without an office," answered the prisoner.
Justice Potts committed him for trial on the ten charges that have been made. Palmer explained that when he used the word "we" he meant himself and the policy holders, as it was a mutual benefit association. He said he did not need any lawyer to defend him. "By the way, Chief," he remarked, just before he was taken down stairs, "you needn't bother to hunt up that address I gave you -372 Front street, New York. Nobody there will know me."

THREE RIFLE SHOTS.

Two Bullets Whistle Past the Head of Mr. Charles Fischer.

Three rifle shots in quick succession startled the patrons of Dick Uldrich's pavilion, on the Newark Bay shore, at Danforthavenue, Jersey City, on Tuesday night. The pavilion was crowded. Two of the builets penetrated the side of a bathing house and whistled past the head of Charles Fischer, one of the attendants. Fischer saw Henry Williams, a watchman in Chadwick Brothers' mill, looking over the fence with a smoking rifle in his bands, and started up there to remonstrate with him. Frederick F. Kelly of Bayonne, another watchman, tried to stop Fischer when he attempted to climb over the fence, and was soundly thrashed. Fischer was arrested yeasterday for assault and battery and Williams for reckless shooting. They were held for examination.
